JOSEPH CALLAHAN RECEIVES
WALTER R. AMES MEMORIAL

MISSOULA, Mont.--

Joseph P. Callahan, Carbondale, Pa., a graduate student in the School of Education at the University of Montana in Missoula, has been named recipient of the Walter R. Ames Memorial Award. The $150 award is given annually by the UM School of Education to a UM student studying at the doctoral level.

The award was established by Dr. Stanley R. Ames, Rochester, N.Y., in honor of his father, Walter R. Ames, who was a UM professor of education from 1919-1955. The award is designed to assist graduate students in education and to further educational research at UM.

Dr. Stanley R. Ames, who is in charge of Kodak's biochemistry research laboratory in Rochester, was one of four UM alumni to receive the 1976 UM Alumni Association's Distinguished Service Award during UM Homecoming activities last October.

Callahan, whose main area of study is educational curriculum and supervision, received a bachelor of arts degree in 1971 and a master of education degree in 1973 from East Stroudsburg State College, East Stroudsburg, Pa. He taught at the East Stroudsburg State College Campus School and in the Department of Education there. He was selected outstanding educator at the college in 1974.

During the 1974-75 academic year, Callahan was an instructor at Northern Montana College, Havre. He is presently working as a research assistant in the Division of Educational Research and Services at UM.
